- 9:30 pm The Eighties - Greed Is Good - After the economic hardship of the 1970s perhaps a period of excess was inevitable. Mammon was king as wealth and materialism assumed a dominant place in American culture and politics. It's a decade of junk bonds, S&L bailouts and pervasive Wall Street corruption. Tom Wolfe wrote about the "Masters of the Universe," and Michael Milken, Ivan Boesky and Charles Keating went from the business page to the front page as their criminal activities were exposed. And in a classic case of art imitating life, a line from a motion picture seemed to set the tone for the entire decade. (S.1 Ep.6) (From the US) (Documentary Series) PG CC New Episode

- 11:20 pm Atlanta - Value - When Jayde, an old friend of Van's, comes to town, the women meet for dinner. Van is quickly put on the defensive due to the wealthy woman's jet-setting lifestyle, and the fact that she passive-aggressively lauds her success and sophistication over her. While both women try to get along, it becomes clear they have unresolved tension between them, much of which revolves around Jayde's assertion that Van doesn't know or respect her own "value." Following an uncomfortable dinner, the women manage to reconcile their differences while smoking weed. The next morning, Van is distressed when she realises she has a drug test at work, leaving her scrambling to find a solution to her problem, which doesn't quite go as planned.
